To whom it may concern

Dear colleagues,

It is with great pleasure that I endorse Lori Foster for President-Elect of IAAP. Her professional interests focus on topics such as sustainable development, technology, public policy, and violence prevention, among others. These issues are increasingly relevant in a globalized world where Psychology is applied to improve the societies in which human beings live. Lori Foster is also sensitive to the problems of vulnerable groups and developing countries. This is especially relevant because, on many occasions, Psychology has followed approaches developed almost exclusively in economically developed Western countries. Cross-cultural dialogue and a knowledge of other cultures allow us to enrich our discipline and its application. Last but not least, she is very active and enthusiastic, which is very especially relevant for this position.
